

Anni, you are so cute. Baby, I want a hug 🍷🍷🍷🍷

This diary entry will be a short one since I mainly want to use it to address what happened today. Anni, I do not care about your ex-boyfriend. As I said before, I entered this relationship with the expectation that even though you are my first love, I knew it was most likely that I was not yours. What I care about is that you are now mine and only mine, because I am yours and only yours. I care about us spending the rest of our lives with each other and supporting each other throughout the journey much more than anything else. As long as you treat me nicely and decently, and you are willing to support me when I need you, I do not care about what happened between your ex-boyfriend and you. If you are willing to share those stories with me, great; I will be your listener and your supporter. However, if you are not willing to tell me, then I will not pressure you. We only belong to each other now; that's what I care about.

Some of the people you know might have an opinion about what I said in the previous paragraph or how I frame it. However, like what I said in the deleted diary entry, I don't really give a flying banana about their opinion on this matter.

That's all for today's diary entry. Talk to me soon. Anni, I love you 🍷🍷🍷🍷